Why we are here? (part 1)

- This was all Lauri's idea.
- We wrote a book on nuclear power and climate change.
- Lauri thought that it would be cool to come here and tell about this book.
- We thought so too, and decided it would be even cooler to release the book here, and now.
- So what is the book about?

About the book

- Short, research-based book on climate change, energy, and nuclear power.
- Key point: we cannot afford to arbitrarily dismiss any low-carbon energy generation.
- Explains probable limits of renewables and energy conservation.
- Details how nuclear power has historically been the most effective means for decarbonization.
- Touches safety and cost issues as well.

Range of estimates of world total energy use in IPCC climate mitigation scenarios

Most optimistic (428 EJ/a) and average of 164 IPCC SRREN estimates (186 EJ/a) of renewable energy potential in 2050

Sustained energy efficiency improvement

Sustained new energy generation build rate

Best increase in electricity generation per capita over 15-year period

Why we are here? (part 2)

- Free books! (Leave a business card!)
- Recommend! Available on Amazon worldwide later this summer.
- Give out to friends! Bulk discounts available :)
- We're interested in localizations/translations as well!
- Finally: a crowdfunding campaign to get a book to everyone in Paris climate summit!

Thank you.

Remember, tonight is the (un)official book release party (after other formal program has ended).

We will be happy to sign the books at any time, especially there.
